Intense flames, dramatic skies, firefighters at work, aircraft dropping fire retardant, ember trails, a “fire whirl” ascending. A new special exhibition at the Buffalo Bill Center of the West shares dramatic images of wildland firefighting taken by a hotshot firefighter in the thick of the action. brave people who combat them. Photographed by Wyoming Hotshot Captain Kyle Miller, Fire on the Mountain provides an intimate encounter with the realities of a changing climate. Kyle began photographing wildfires in 2004 while serving on a fire crew in Montana. A resident of Cody, Wyoming, Kyle joined the Wyoming Interagency Hotshot crew in 2010. Hotshots are highly trained, specialized wildland firefighters who use various ground tactics and hand tools to slow and stop fires from spreading. The work is physically strenuous, mentally taxing, and requires a high level of conditioning in both body and mind.
